WHAT THE ROSES SAID.

The bees sipped sweets from the clover,
The birds sang, up in the blue,
And the lily cups ran over
With dainty morning dew.
The roses laughed together,
—As gossiping roses do—
And said that such beautiful weather
He knew that she heard the roses,
For her cheeks were pink as their own,
And her eyes, as a flower half closes,
Looked down at a wayside stone.
The world seemed fairly enchanted
As the birds sang, and the breeze
Brought the sound of the ocean's music,
And of bells from the upland leas.
As they walked through the blossoming byways,
They seemed from the world apart,
Only these two together,
And they were heart to heart.
And then in the spell of their gladness
That fell from the Hand above,
They forgot all sorrow and sadness,
And remembered only—love.
Belfast. M. E. F.

THE UNCHANGEABLE.

Bright were the charms of yesterday,
How glad your smile, how kind your tone;
Your hand was strong to lead, our way
Wound where the light of heaven shone.
Some hours are far too sweet to stay—
Farewell, lost yesterday!
To-day—we'll let the day go on;
To-morrow—that may never be.
The sun goes down, new glories dawn,
And God rules through immensity.
'Whate'er betide, if good or ill,
He will be with us still.
P. C. D.

I told her of a maid whose mind
Was filled with tender thoughts and fancies,
A lovely being of the kind
They write about in old romances,
"Knowest thou," said I, "this maiden fair
Whose beauty doth my thoughts beguile?"
She answered with a dreamy air—
"Well, I should smile!"

NO. 4. EVENING AT NORTHPORT.

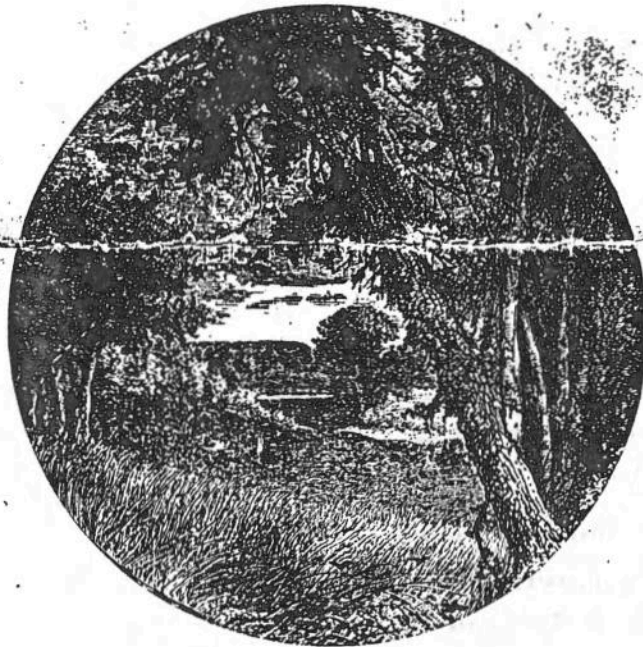

The day is done. The work day world threw aside its tools, closed its shops and stopped its machinery when the bell struck 6 P. M., and one can almost feel a peacefulness and quietude in the very air on the ceasing of the days whirr. And now commences evening at Northport. The sun is not yet gone down, in fact nearly an hour remains of the day, but it has sunk behind the grove and hill and the shades are slanting over the beach and across the bay.

Tea is over and the cottagers are all out the crowd disperses to their various cottages and the usual scene continues.

By and by the clouds in the east become silvered with light and in a few minutes the moon in full glory rises over the cloud coronal and sends its slanting rays in all directions, while a silver bridge of light seems laid beneath its gaze across the placid bosom of the bay.

It is the real boating season of the year. The air is calm, the bay is scarcely rippled and the boats glide as though automatically on a sea of glass. Music from happy voices floats in from the bay and the old sweet songs and touching hymns sound never so sweetly as now.

SUMMER QUIET.

doors where it is just cool and shady enough for strolling or lounging, for boating or idling, and the hammocks rest is inviting. It is Saturday evening and this of all the evenings of the week seems to be the chief, the complement, the rounding out as it were of the seven days. There are more arrivals than any other night and the head of many a family comes between the six and nine o'clock bell, and reunions are plenty in tents and cottages.

At seven o'clock it is dusky; the sun has set; the lights begin to twinkle soon; the young folks two by two stroll in the avenues and on the shore, and it is evening in reality. As it nears eight o'clock and darkness creeps on, the cottagers illuminate with many colored lights and lanterns which shine out vividly from the dark back-ground; bonfires are lit on the shore; fireworks are sent off, and amid all the Bangor steamer Ralph Ross, loaded with humanity from the heated city, signals in the bay and steams in to the wharf, where a crowd of residents wait to welcome the new comers. For a while all is bustle and greeting, but soon

The roll of the rollers at the pavilion sounds upon the air and the music of the band is borne upon the light and languid breeze, softened and sweetened by the distance. And so the evening wears on. The cottagers and tenters pass the time in social converse, in quiet rubbers of whist, in floating on the smooth waters under the smiling moon, at the rink, in the hammocks, and some more venturesome take a moonlight bath where the tide ripples and swashes in on the pebbly beach.

At nine o'clock the bell from the distant Belfast steeple is faintly heard telling the hour, and gradually the lights go out, the cottagers retire to rest undisturbed by sultriness or insect pests, and by ten o'clock a calm has settled down on the whole community, the evening has passed and night is upon us.

Back numbers of this volume of the SEA BREEZE, Nos. 1, 2 and 3, can be obtained at the sanctum, Clear View cottage on So. Shore; or uptown at the publishing office No. 10 Main St., Belfast.

She is summering at Northport and intended making an excursion to Islesboro &c. She was to meet her best fellow at the wharf to take the steamer, and it now lacked but a few minutes before it started. Her hand was on the door to go out, when it struck her that she had forgotten to line her left eye brow. Rushing to the glass to fix this, she discovered a small red spot, commemorative of a departed pimple. A dab of women's necessary evil settled that defect, and she was about to start again, when a backward glance assured her that her new hat was not just right, so she stopped just long enough to give it a punch over on one ear and a "nyke" in the back. Then her "bangs" wanted a little arranging and an inch of blond must be pinned across her nose. Then she parted her lips to see if her filled tooth showed plainly, and that started a most seductive dimple in one cheek, which suggested a scrap of black court-plaster. Then she tilted the glass and walked across the room with her head over her shoulder to get a back view of herself, gave her skirts a twitch here and there, tried to see how long a step she could take without bursting the tapes; gave herself a little shake like a sparrow after a shower, changed her button gloves for six, sprinkled Florida water on her lace handkerchief, stamped her little beach shoes once or twice to settle herself, and seizing her parasol in the most approved style to show the lace to advantage, started for the wharf. But where was the steamer and George! Where oh, where.

IN TIME OF PEACE PREPARE FOR WAR.—According to the history of the progress of the scourge cholera, it is due in this country next year, and if it shows itself in the northern cities as it is likely it will, there will be a perfect stampede of residents to the seashore, which will make property here more desirable and high-priced.

We are naturally well situated in regard to drainage but it is well for us to prepare for the worst by a little taking of time by the fore-lack. On the Grounds proper a system of drainage has been commenced which should be continued, and all cottagers, tenters, and parties interested everywhere along shore should be careful, this year, that all decaying animal and vegetable matters are either burned, buried, or cast into the salt water, so we may have pure air and cleanliness with which to commence the season of '85, as well as to enjoy during the present. Remember a stitch in time saves nine and by a general action and due care exercised on our part we may keep our little resort free from epidemics.

This is about the size of it. There are probably twenty thousand visitors from other states and sections at the present writing paying out from one to four dollars per day each to the summer hotels and boarding houses of Maine. Accepting two dollars as the average daily rate of board—which is really much too low, being about the minimum—here is something like two hundred and eighty thousand dollars per week flowing into Maine from this source alone.

pleasant, little season. Northport, where old ocean rolls in his waves at our feet, and the cooling breezes sigh through shady groves on the shores of the grand old Penobscot bay, was little more than an unbroken wilderness.

In 1848 the East Maine Methodist C. M. Association located here, purchasing 25 acres of land. In August, 1849, the first camp-meeting was held here, and for nearly twenty-five years it was occupied only a week each year for meetings, with no indication that it would ever become a popular summer resort.

But with the growing fashion for spending summer vacations at the seaside, the attention of the people in this section of the State was turned toward Northport, as a desirable place for summer residences.

As the place became better known, and its attractions of pure air, cleanliness, quietude and all other virtues which go to make up a pleasant and needful place of resort, were fully understood, it began to grow, and during the past five years it has become so thickly studded with cottages as to resemble a village, while all along the shore, the movement has kept pace, and the shore, almost from Belfast city to several miles beyond the Grounds, is thickly dotted with cottages of summer residents, many of them being well and valuable as well as stylish.

Down shore below the "Bluff" great improvements are being made. The Spiritualists have located a camp-ground in a beautiful grove on the shore, laid out a miniature village, built cottages, an auditorium, a fine wharf, &c., and a town road is being built along the shore connecting the two camp-grounds, and furnishing a fine drive.

The view from Northport seaward, is beautiful for the whole broad expanse of Penobscot Bay lies before us—a bay which travelers say rivals the far-famed Bay of Naples, dotted here and there with the white sails of lumber-laden vessels from Bangor, or swift flying sail-boats, and daily with majestic steamers plowing past and sending billowy, surfy waves breaking with hollow roar against the shore, while at the south the islands stand guard to keep out the rough Atlantic storms. Across to eastward is the village of Castine, ancient historical and modern educational ground, while at the north lies Brigadier's Island and the villages of Stockton and Searsport, with the spires and harbor of Belfast in the near distance.

There is good bathing and rowing, and fine drives in the neighborhood, Belfast, and Temple Heights being near, and Mt. Percival or the Bluff only a mile off, from which can be obtained a splendid view of the scenery in the neighborhood; the sailing is safe and roomy, and the fishing privileges fine, within a stone's throw of the shore.

One of the greatest advantages of Northport, as a summer resort, is the location and conveniences for reaching and leaving here at short notice. Telephonic connection; Boston boats daily to and from Boston and intermediate landings to Bangor; small steamers from Bangor, Belfast, Castine and Islesboro; hacks connect with the Me. Central R. R. at Belfast, from where trains leave twice a day.

TEMPLE HEIGHTS.

Maine State Spiritual Temple, Second Annual Camp-Meeting.

On the westerly side of Penobscot Bay a few miles south of Wesleyan Grove Camp-ground, and a short distance above Saturday Cove, Northport, is located the new camp-ground owned by the Spiritualists and named Temple Heights. It is located in a pretty grove of deciduous and evergreen trees with a fine beach, and the property is what was known as the Brown farm containing over 100 acres, upon the roadside of which is a substantial farm house, and a portion of which is under cultivation.

The company is composed of some fifteen gentlemen and the officers for the past year have been:—Pres. E. W. Bailey, of Bradford; Sec., Mrs. Clara Butterfield, of Bradley; Treasurer, J. W. Herrick, of Bradford; Trustees—Daniel Plummer, of Dexter, Hiram Butterfield, of Bradley, and Calvin Kingman, of Waltham. The annual meeting for the election of officers is to be held to-day. The Temple was organized Dec. 22, 1882, and located last year.

The location is possessed of fine natural advantages for the uses intended. The shore portion is well shaded; the ground rises gradually and slopes back from the shore and beach affording good drainage; the tide water is bold, deep near shore; and the soil is dry and easily cleared. In the center of the park is a never failing spring of excellent water and of sufficient volume to supply a large crowd, which has been utilized in wells and reservoirs. A new, large and substantial wharf has lately been finished at which the large steamers can land at lowest tides. The grounds have been laid out with a park and auditorium in the center, and no cottages are to be allowed to obstruct the water view. A large building for speakers' stand, &c., and permanent seats will be built another year.

The ground is yet in a comparatively rough state but enough work in grading, road making and cottage building has already been done to show what it will be.

Eleven cottages have been built or are in process of construction, several of which are stylish and valuable. Another year will see twice the number erected, as the attorney who is authorized to convey lots, F. A. Dickey, of Northport, reports a large number sold.

The new town road laid out from Saturday Cove to So. Shore avenue at the Methodist Grounds, around the bluff on the shore, passes through the Heights, and the lower end from the Cove through the park northward is already finished, and passable. The contractors Messrs. Hawkins and Smith will have the whole five miles finished by December, and another year it will furnish a lovely ride, and cottages will spring up on its course all along shore, especially at the Bluff where there are many very desirable cottage lots.

The annual camp-meeting commenced last Tuesday and by night the cottages were filled and 27 tents erected. The heavy rain of Wednesday and Thursday seriously interfered with the progress of the meeting.

Our reporter sends us the following particulars:—The meeting was opened Tuesday afternoon at 2 P. M., with a conference at the stand. In the absence of the President, H. C. Berry, of Portland, was chosen President pro tem. He opened the meeting with appropriate remarks, and introduced Dr. L. F. Webster, of Portland, as chairman of the meetings. After remarks appropriate to the occasion, and reading a poem entitled, "The Good Time Now," he introduced Mrs. P. D. Bradbury, of Fairfield, who under control gave an invocation, followed by remarks by Dr. Webster, Mrs. Wentworth, Mrs. Barter, Mrs. Morse, Miss L. Barnicoat, Mr. Wentworth, Dr. Thomas and Mrs. Bradbury. Owing to the rain Wednesday, no services were held at the stand. The meetings will continue over Sunday—conference meeting and lecture in the forenoon, and lectures afternoon and evening.

MISCELLANEOUS.

More beauties can be seen on the Rodick steps than at any other place in town, and the beaux ain't far off.

If some of the young people now at the several hotels, who hail from a metropolis, should conduct themselves in their own city as they do here, they would be set down as belonging to a very low strata of society. They act just as the low lived people do, any way.

Bar Harbor has enjoyments for the sinners as well as the saint, and we suppose now, and then a wicked person gets down there. It makes but little difference, however, as you can't tell a blackleg from a saint. The best of each kind look alike.

—Bar Harbor Tourist.

First female sympathizer—"It is too bad. That poor man will have to be hung. They can't get a respite, and the death-watch has already been set over him." Second female sympathizer—"The death-watch? how awful it sounds!" "Yes; what can we do now except send him some more bouquets?" "Yes; poor, poor man! we must keep his cell decorated with flowers. You see, most murderers have wives to comfort them in the last terrible days, but this poor man has none." "True, very true; it was his wife that he killed, poor fellow."

An exchange says:—Many New England resorts continue to complain of bad business. North Conway, N. H., has never known so poor a season, and "very few people are seen on the streets or anywhere." Cold and disagreeable weather has kept visitors away from Old Orchard Beach also; and the same complaint comes from Mt. Desert and Narragansett Pier. Block Island hotels, on the other hand, are declared to be well filled with guests. Mt. Desert is puzzling over the season for the dullness of the summer visitor trade. The weather has been too cold for comfort, but a local paper thinks the falling off is largely "due to the fact that those who were once the long-season boarders are now cottagers; and the fact that all along our coast little, cheap, one-horse resorts are springing up, and that every family who gets to one of those insignificant little places might otherwise go to Bar Harbor or to some other respectable resort."

The reference to the "cheap one horse resorts" is good, and the reference to "Bar Harbor or some other respectable resort," is just too good for anything as the girls say. Why you dear good souls we the people, the plain people, the common people, are learning a thing or two. What we want on our vacation is quiet, good air and plenty of healthy food, and it is at just such little "one horse" places all along the Maine coast that we find these requisites. Its no use to kick, the "little one horse resorts" are bound to win.

FURNITURE. Some idea of the extent in this branch of business as now carried on of Boston, can be obtained by visiting the warehouses at Paine's manufactory on Canal Street, Boston. This is one of the largest in the country, with show rooms, covering acres of floor-room, stocked with every variety of house furniture, at manufacturers' and importers' prices, which save about one-third the retail price to their customers.

SEA WRACK.

From Greenland's icy mountains,
Oh, never look so shy;
The flag that braved a thousand years,
Good-bye, sweetheart, good-bye.

When the Sun is sinking down,
The young maid in airy gown
Sits at the window waiting for her beau, beau, beau,
She is not long sitting there
Till her "feller" doth appear,
And together to a cream saloon they go, go,
go.

"All we like sheep," sang the soprano,
And on the wrinkled face of Hannah
Appeared a frown. "All we like sheep,"
Echoed the bass in chest notes deep,
And frown became a perfect scowl.
When from the chorus came a howl
"All we like sheep," the love of truth
Instilled in Hannah's soul in youth,
Spoke out: "No! Sam nor me don't eat
Never a mouthful of sheep meat.
All we like pork, they might ha' said,
And hit the nail right on the head."
But, "We like sheep have gone astray,"
Unheard by Hannah was that day.

BY THE BARS.

They stood in the evening's gloaming,
Down by the pasture bars,
And with a look of soft contentment
Gazed up at the peeping stars;
No word broke in on the stillness
That spread o'er the fields around,
Save the twitter of birds in the tree-tops
Or the whistle of quail on the ground.
In her eyes of a rich brown color,
Was a look of sweet content,
And he gazed softly upon her features
As toward each other they bent;
And thus they stood in the gloaming
Under the throbbing stars,
But no word by either was spoken
As they stood by the pasture bars;
Yet many a pair has been silent
As the one that was then, I trow,
For he was a Norman draft-horse
And she was a brindle cow.

THE BATHER.

I list to the patter of waves,
I list to her laugh of glee,
And dream about beauteous coral caves
And sirens beneath the sea.

I imagine I see her put,
In a manner free and bold,
In the ocean her dainty sandaled foot,
To see if the water's cold.

I dream of her shimmering hair,
And her little snowy hand,
And the half-forgotten, free-from-care,
Dear hours spent on the strand.

Once more I lead her about
In the tossing, foamy main.

But my vision is quickly put to rout,
And my bosom filled with pain,

As I wake to the merry cries,
All coming with wondrous vim
From the bath room, and I realize
They're washing my brother Jim.

'SPACIALLY JIM.

I was mighty good lookin' when I was young,
Pert, an' black eyed and slim,
With fellers a-courtin' me Sunday nights,
'Spacially Jim.

The likeliest one of 'em all was he,
Chipper, an' han'som', an' trim,
But I tossed up my head an' made fun o' the crowd,
'Spacially Jim.

I said I hadn't no 'pinion o' men,
An' I wouldn't take stock in him!
But they kept up a-comin' in spite o' my talk,
'Spacially Jim!

I got so tired o' havin' 'em roun',
('Spacially Jim!)
I made up my mind I'd settle down
An' take up with him.

So we was married one day in church,
'Twas crowded full to the brim;
'Twas the only way to get rid of 'em all,
'Spacially Jim.

GREEN MOUNTAIN HOUSE,

BAR HARBOR, MAINE,

H. W. CHASE, Proprietor.

This new and finely appointed house, situated on the summit of Green Mountain, has just been completed and opened for the special accommodation of summer tourists. Situated on the highest point of land on the coast, it has a broad and picturesque panorama, the beauty of which is said to be unsurpassed in the world. The most interesting points within a range of a hundred miles are brought into seeming proximity by the powerful telescope in the tower of the hotel. There is no grander sight in the world than sunrise as seen from this house.
By setting a good table, loaded with all the luxuries of the season, and served by polite and attentive waiters, the proprietor hopes to satisfy his numerous tourist patrons. The train of the mountain railway stops here two and one-half hours for dinner. A train arrives at 5.35 P. M., and returns at 7.35 A. M., for the accommodation of those who desire to remain over night. Special attention paid to dinner parties, and parties remaining over night to see the sunset and sunrise.
